Providing healthy food with local farms

In this issue:
- Food Insecurity Screening and Referral Initiative
- Will Bike 4 Food – Ride & Seek
- Remembering Betty and Charles Barker
The following businesses, organizations and foundations made a gift of $1,000 or more between January 1 and March 31, 2021

Alternative for Youth Foundation, Inc.
America’s Gardening Resource, Inc.
Amherst Knights of Columbus Council 1619 Inc.
Anthem, Inc.
Apex Orchards
Atkins Farms
Axia Insurance Services
Barings LLC
Baystate Medical Center
Boyd Technologies, Inc.
C & S Wholesale Grocers, Inc.
Claire L Bateman 1991 Trust
Committee To Elect Nick Cocchi
Community Foundation of New Jersey
Danco Modern Furniture and Accessories
Dean’s Beans Organic Coffee Company
Dennis Group, LLC
Dr. Hauschka Skin Care, Inc.
Edward H. and Margaret A. Malone Foundation
Feeding America
Freedom Credit Union
Greater Boston Food Bank
Guardian Life Insurance Company
Hampden County Career Center, Inc.
Hands Across the Valley Quilters Guild
Honda Financial Services
HUB International Limited
Jameson Family Foundation
Keybank National Association
Klarman Family Foundation
Lia Toyota of Northampton
Loomis Fund
Mass Mutual-Ins Ops
Massachusetts Broadcasters Association
Polish National Credit Union
Price Chopper’s Golub Foundation
River Valley Market, LLC
Rovithis Realty, LLC
Stop & Shop Family Foundation
Subaru of America, Inc.
Target Corporate-Foundation
Three Friends Charitable Fund
UMACC
Whole Foods Market
Women’s Benevolent Society
Women’s Fund of Western Massachusetts

The top food donors between January 1 and March 31, 2021

1. Big Y*
2. Stop and Shop
3. BJ’s*
4. Target
5. Walmart*
6. Cumberland Farms*
7. A. Martinez Produce Company*
8. Aldi*
9. Coca-Cola/Minute-Maid Co.*
10. Bimbo*

*multiple stores combined

The Food Bank’s vision is a Western Massachusetts where no one goes hungry and everyone has access to nutritious food.

Vol 10 — Issue 3 — Summer 2021
Published by The Food Bank of Western Massachusetts, Inc.
97 North Hatfield Road, Hatfield, MA 01038
413-247-9738 • info@foodbankwma.org • foodbankwma.org
Executive Director, Word of Mouth Editor-in-Chief: Andrew Morehouse
Editor: Lillian Baulding
Contributing writer: Alethea Melanson
Design & Layout: Sarah Adam
Cover photo: Food Bank farm seedlings by Alethea Melanson
The Food Bank is committed to promoting cultural diversity through its board of directors, staff, volunteers and local member feeding sites. This institution is an equal opportunity provider. To file a complaint of discrimination, write: USDA, Director, Office of Civil Rights, Washington, DC 20250-9410.
Your name is safe. We have never rented, sold, or loaned our donor list, and we never will. Without our donors, our work would not be possible. We value your support and privacy.
From the Executive Director

Providing healthy food with local farms

It’s tough for families at risk of hunger to feed their kids healthy meals when school is not in session and free school meals are unavailable. Since the pandemic began, 1 in 6 children (26,830) are now facing food insecurity in Western Massachusetts. This represents a 27% increase over pre-pandemic levels. Can you imagine what it must feel like as a parent knowing your child is not eating enough nutritious food? Fortunately, with your support, we are well positioned to continue providing healthy food to families with children this summer as we have been since the beginning of the pandemic and long before. We have strong reciprocal relationships with more than 50 local farms. Last year, they donated collectively almost 700,000 lbs. of fresh produce. Using principally funds from the Massachusetts Emergency Food Assistance Program (MEFAP) administered by the Mass. Dept. of Agricultural Resources, The Food Bank also purchased just over one million pounds of fresh produce from local farms at a cost just shy of $272,000.

By supporting our local farmers, we are investing in the local farm economy to strengthen community as well as household food security. As a region, producing more of the food we eat and making this food accessible to everyone is essential for long-term self-reliance and resiliency in the face of future economic downturns and climate change.

For these reasons, we purchased a second Food Bank Farm in Hadley in 2019 and are beginning our second growing season on it. We now have long-term agreements with farmers Joe Czajkowski (Lakeside Organics) and Gideon Porth (Atlas Farm) to farm it in exchange for a share of the harvest in lieu of cash rent. This arrangement is like our longstanding partnership with Ben Perrault (Mountainview Farm CSA) on our first Food Bank Farm, which we have owned since 1992.

We are very grateful for the support that we receive from our local farmers and from you! ♦

Andrew Morehouse, Executive Director
andrewm@foodbankwma.org
413.203.4801

1 MILLION LBS. OF PRODUCE PURCHASED FROM:

- Sugar Mountain Produce
- Wendolowski Farm
- Plainville Farm
- Szawlowski Potato Farms
- Honey Pot Farm
- Lakeside Organics Farm
- Atlas Farm
- J. M. Pasiecnik Farm
For the past three years, The Food Bank has supported patients from Western Massachusetts Health Centers through the Food Insecurity Screening and Referral Initiative (FISRI). Alan Dallmann, Hunger Solutions Innovator at The Food Bank, oversees FISRI and explains how he and his team are working with other organizations in the region to provide desperately needed services.

FISRI is one more way The Food Bank of Western Massachusetts connects residents to services that help them become more food secure. Although the initial referral from health centers is for direct food assistance, we also direct patients to other services that can bring them more financial stability.

To provide a clear example of how important FISRI screenings have been, I’d like to share a story from Johanna (Jo) Farrell, one of our food assistance resource coordinators. Holyoke Health Center referred to Jo a patient who screened positive for food insecurity. He and his family were from Puerto Rico and had moved to the area in January after his wife experienced a reoccurrence of cancer. “They were living in a friend’s basement,” Jo said, “until they got on their feet.”

In January, the man began working at Yankee Candle and his wife started medical treatment. Their teenage boys are adjusting to their new life. The family needed support.

“I was able to refer them to Wayfinders for housing and MassHire for employment training. I also informed them about the nearest food pantry in their area and shared the 413cares.org social services website,” Jo added.

“He and his wife were very appreciative for all the information.”

By addressing the causes and effects of food insecurity in partnership with other social service organizations and health care centers, we can help provide lasting solutions to those who need them. We look forward to deepening our community partnerships.
Since 2019, the number of food insecure individuals in Massachusetts increased 20% (682,420 persons)

- 12% of all Western Mass. residents (99,890)
- 17% of all children in Western Mass. (26,830)

[Source: Feeding America. Revised March 2021]

Learn more: foodbankwma.org/2021-mass-food-insecurity-projections
Friends and family of the late Betty and Charles Barker say the couple was committed to serving their community, but most never knew the depth of their philanthropy. The Barkers made a point of donating anonymously to The Food Bank and many other local non-profit organizations for decades. They began giving to The Food Bank in 1998, and after Charles passed away three years ago, Betty continued that tradition until her passing in early 2021. The Barkers were concerned— not with recognition— but with making a difference in the lives of people in need.

Today, their giving spirit lives on in their daughter Ann, co-owner of Quonquont Farm in Whately, who has served on The Food Bank’s board of directors since January 2020. “My parents were humble philanthropists, who quietly shared their good fortune with others. They were passionate believers in the importance of community and the need to show compassion and kindness to others,” Barker said. “I am grateful to have seen their compassion in action and find comfort in knowing their impact in the community is deep and lasting.”

Over the years with their generous contributions, the Barkers made possible countless meals for individuals facing food insecurity and hunger. And, as food insecurity spiked last year during the COVID-19 pandemic, increased donor generosity enabled The Food Bank to distribute more healthy food than ever before in its almost 40-year history. Without this support, providing nutritious emergency food would have been impossible in communities across all four counties of western Massachusetts.

The generosity and compassion the Barkers displayed make the mission of The Food Bank possible. “We are grateful for their philanthropic support to lift up so many people who were going through hard times,” said Andrew Morehouse, executive director of The Food Bank.

Read the full article at: foodbankwma.org/newsroom
ACTION CREATES CHANGE.
ONE MILE AT A TIME.

11th Annual
WILL BIKE 4 FOOD presented by
STOP&SHOP

The Ride & Seek Community Challenge paves the way to an in-person event –
September 26, 2021

Register now: willbike4food.org
“I’m struggling to put food on the table. My kiddo eats from our veggie garden and lots of bread and cheese, plus eggs from our two chickens.”

– Local parent*

foodbankwma.org/ donate

*This quote is taken from a local parent who wishes to remain anonymous.